Formitrol™ Ant Bait Gel

Formitrol™ Ant Bait Gel combines two powerful active ingredients – (S)-methoprene, and dinotefuran – creating a dual-action bait for quick and lasting results. All ants belong to a single family, Formicidae – that's why we chose the name Formitrol™. Eliminating the entire colony is essential for effective control, which can be difficult to achieve. Having a rotation of products with proven efficacy for a variety of scenarios is key. Utilizes dual active ingredients to disrupt the ant life cycle and achieve long-term control. Offers a combination of sweet and protein to attract a broad range of ants. Approved for indoor and outdoor treatment of residential, industrial, and recreational sites. Apply bait in spots or strips of bait near actively foraging ants, mound entrances, or nest sites (For full application details, refer to product specimen label)

TECH TIP

Solving your customer's moisture and humidity problems can be a profitable, beneficial service offering and integrated pest management at its best.

Most every home has a humidity or moisture issue due to air leakage that is likely creating other problems within the home. For example, homes with ventilated crawlspaces are often one of the most overlooked breeding grounds for pests. Newly constructed homes that are built tighter with less air leakage and more insulation creates better thermal efficiencies, but also increases the moisture load on the home. Moisture comes from a number of sources. Cooking, bathing, washing, sweating, and breathing are internally generated sources by the homeowner. Leaks in the foundation, or the roof, or plumbing leaks are others.

Dehumidifiers can be an effective solution for homeowners looking for a GREEN or natural alternative to controlling certain pests within a home. Controlling moisture is truly integrated pest management at its best.

Dehumidification is a relatively easy service to add as you already have an existing customer base. In addition, there does not need to be added cost for new personnel – you can train your existing technicians. This can also create more opportunities within the slower winter seasons. It is essentially an extension of an already provided service, such as exclusions.
